

Mere morsels

Fresh produce

Television chef and food writer Donal Skehan is leading a campaign to get children to grow their own vegetables. Under the Innocent Drinks and GIY Sow & Grow project, participants can register as a group or school to receive seeds, soil, growing cups and guides. Classes that keep diaries detailing their efforts will even get to meet Skehan. innocentdrinks.ie/sowandgrow

Global warming

The Kilkenny Food Company has launched a range of soups inspired by some of the world's most famous street food. The Fusion and Street range comes in four flavours and the list of authentic ingredients includes kaffir lime leaves, aged basmati rice and garam masala spice mix. Available in supermarkets, it's priced at €2.59 for 400g. kilkennyfoodcompany.com

Game changer

Dylan McGrath has created a new menu at his Fade Street Social restaurant in Dublin despite only opening four months ago. A total of 27 new dishes have been added in response to customer feedback. Appetisers include beef tongue, white beef, lamb and cod are prepared in an on-site smoker. The menu starts at €25. fadestreetssocial.com

